HISTORY

Harcourt Street was opened 1777 by John Hatch, barrister and Seneschal of the Manor of St. Sepulchre. Development was sporadic during the early history of the street, most notably the construction of Clonmell House in the 1770s.

Hatch sold Clonmell House to John Scott who was created Earl of Clonmell in 1793. The house and grounds were sold in 1810 following his death.

One of the grandest and oldest remaining houses on the street, it is ornamented by high-quality ironwork railings and obelisk lamp standards, clearly the work of a skilled artisan.

The plain, well-balanced façade is enhanced by a centrally placed Adamesque doorcase with full-width fanlight, a feature typical of the larger houses on the street.

Casey (2005) notes that the interior retains decorative plasterwork likely by Michael Stapleton. It was the temporary home of the Municipal Gallery of Modern Art, 1908-32, housing part of Sir Hugh Lane collection of Impressionist paintings.
